

West Warwick Housing Authority celebrates service

WEST WARWICK – The West Warwick Housing Authority recently held its annual meeting, where it presented five “Community Partnership Awards” to groups or individuals that assisted the housing authority in promoting its mission, and also honored the authority’s employee of the year.

Among the groups who were honored with community partnership awards were:

- Dunkin Donuts – both the Main Street and Washington Avenue stores – were recognized for their generous donations of coffee, donuts and pastry for events conducted at the housing authority’s two elderly developments.

- Two residents at West Warwick Manor were recognized for their monthly meal for residents on the last Saturday of the month when funds are scarce for some residents. Known as the Manor Dinner Club, residents Paula Labrie and Joan Card feed 50-80 residents monthly.

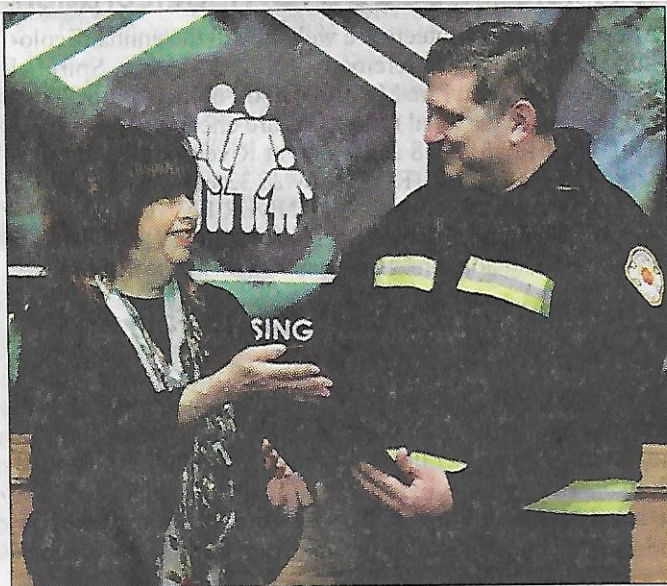

- Another awardee was Eileen McNeilis, who resides at Clyde Tower on Main Street. She was recognized for her Meals with Eileen, which provides hundreds of meals throughout the month for residents. McNeilis cooks and prepares the meals herself with assistance from other residents.

- The fifth partnership award was presented to the University of Rhode Island’s Program for Community Health Nursing, which regularly conducts blood pressure and blood sugar screenings at the two elderly developments. Tom Stegnicki, an instructor for the program accepted on behalf of the program.

The housing authority also recognized Charlene Fraser, the authority’s facilities manager as its Employee of the Year. Executive Director Stephen J. O’Rourke said, “Charlene has done an outstanding job in a nontraditional role for a woman.” He thanked her for her outstanding performance over the previous year.
